The Concord Review Summer Program 2015 Application Form

Mission Statement:

The Concord Review Summer Writing Program is a 2-week program that provides guidance for high school students in writing high-caliber, in-depth research papers. During the program, students attend interactive group classes, have individual meetings with the instructors, attend a question and answer session with past authors, work in research and writing sessions, visit historical sites, see documentaries on various topics in history, and read past Concord Review essays.

The program also includes time for students to have discussions with their peers on history-related articles, what they have learned, the topics of their paper, and other history research and academic-writing-related topics.
